Autarky is the characteristic of self-sufficiency; the term usually applies to political states, societies or to their economic systems. Autarky exists whenever an entity survives or continues its activities without external assistance or international trade. If a self-sufficient economy also refuses to conduct any trade with the outside world, economists may term it a "closed economy".

Autarky - Wikipedia

The AKP government has had three priorities: achieving defense autarky; increasing Turkish defense industry exports and revenues; and upgrading Turkey's prestige as a rising power. Aggressive policies caused the Turkish defense sector to achieve remarkable success in a relatively short period of time, with net sales rising from $1.85 billion in 2006 to around $8.7 billion in 2018.

I think that "dependency" is usually the thing that you depend on, whereas dependence is the state of depending on it. But there are certainly cases where you could use either interchangeably. And as others have pointed out, there is potential for ambiguity: if A is dependent on B, then a dependence or dependency (relationship) exists; but referring to either A or B as the dependency demands context.

What is Autarky? An autarky refers to the state of self-reliance, and it typically is applied to an economic system or nation characterized by self-sufficiency and limited trade.

Autarky Defintiion

Autarky in security and defence is extremely difficult to achieve and some dependencies may be useful for the EU. Autonomy as emancipation is the closest one can get to full autonomy, but the EU is not presently seeking strategic emancipation from all of its dependencies.

Strategic autonomy: towards 'European sovereignty' in defence?

Autarky has its usage in a non-economic sense too. At times it is used in military reference wherein a country might take no help from any other country in its defense. It has been in force to various extents in different parts of the world in the past and also, in the current economic system, where protectionism is coming to the fore more and more.

Autarky (Meaning, Example) | What is Autarky Economy?

Autarky, an economic system of self-sufficiency and limited trade. A country is said to be in a complete state of autarky if it has a closed economy, which means that it does not engage in international trade with any other country. Historically, societies have utilized different levels of autarky.
